

Downloading your digital book

When purchasing a digital book from The Book Merchant, you will receive a link to an EPUB file on the order paid page:

You will also receive an email with a link:

How to exactly import/download the EPUB file depends on your device and whether you download from the email or directly from the order page. If unsure, try a google search on your device type and importing/downloading EPUBs.

Our download links last for 48 hours and three downloads. This discourages unauthorised sharing of ebooks and breaking copyright.

If the file does not download, please contact us or 0417 900 145. We can always reissue the download link.

How to read an EPUB file

We love the EPUB file format because its the international standard. We know it's going to work on all sorts of devices.

The exception being Amazon Kindle readers or apps. Sorry but Amazon likes to use its own format called Mobi.

Generally, we use a particular type of EPUB called fixed-layout. When reading and navigating, it will feel very much like a PDF. We recommend using a tablet over a mobile phone to read a fixed-layout EPUB because they won't allow you to set the font type and size (that's a reflowable EPUB). To increase the size of the text and images, use your fingers to zoom in/out.

The EPUB is fully searchable. Depending on your eReader, you should be able to search and bookmark favourite pages. Again depending on your device, the table of content may appear as a side or pop-down menu.

Most devices will have an inbuilt eReader that will allow you to import EPUB files:

iPad/MAC

PC

Microsoft recommends several apps <https://www.microsoft.com/en-au/store/collections/thereadingroom>. Freda gets very good reviews.

Android

Google Play Books is the default reader for Android devices. There should be an Upload to Play Books option via your email or file folder. There are many other eReaders available from Google Play.

Kindle eReaders

EPUBs won't work. Kindle uses its own format and large eBooks can't be downloaded from anywhere other than the Kindle Store.
